One Party Waiting

Have you ever been called to the telephone and heard a soft voice say "Mr. Blank would like to speak to you." And then waited anywhere from two to five minutes before Blank came on the line? The Problem is, we did not need to inform what you thought or repeat what you were saying to yourself as you waited.

Possibly Mr. Blank did not think I is a busy man; so, while he was cleaning up the rag-end of one piece of work, he gave me the time of day, and telegrapher to "Go Mr. Whooze on the phone." He did it; and Whooze has to waste his time waiting.

The right thing for Whooze to would be to hang up the phone as let it hang until Blank was ready to do his own calling. There is no out wasting your valuable time do not come under that head.

Apart from the rudeness it shows—the disregard of others' right to convenience—it is not good business to keep a man, probably just as busy hanging on the end of a wire. He is not likely to be in the best humor after the wait; the deal that may have gone through may "gang" altogether on that account.
